Joseph Williams

Admissions Recruiter

My name is Joseph Williams, but a simple Joe is fine. I serve as an Admissions Recruiter at SGSC and in my role, I work closely with prospective students, families, counselors, and community partners to help guide students through the college enrollment process and connect them with opportunities that align with their goals.

I am currently a graduate student at Valdosta State University pursuing my Master of Public Administration. I am also a proud alumnus of Waycross College and was a member of the school's first men's basketball team to win a state championship, while also earning Tournament MVP honors. I later went on to graduate and play Division I basketball at Charleston Southern University. Throughout my journey, I was fortunate to learn from several impactful coaches, including Cory Baldwin, SGSC's current men's basketball coach, who played a major role in my development and success both on and off the court.

Outside of my professional role, I am deeply passionate about coaching youth sports and mentoring young athletes. Coaching allows me to pass down the lessons, discipline, and life skills that were instilled in me by my own coaches. I believe strongly in pouring knowledge into the next generation and helping young people build confidence, character, and purpose through sports and education.

Family is everything to me, and I enjoy spending time with my children, staying active in the community, and continuing to give back through mentorship and service. I am grateful to be part of the SGSC family and proud to contribute to an institution that values student success, leadership, and community impact.
